

TEUTONIC PLEASURE

The Tutima Glashütte Patria is a classic men's dress watch that comes with all the necessary trappings that the category requires, including a subtle second time zone hidden in the seconds subdial. At 43 mm, and with a solid, 18-karat gold construction, the watch shouldn't remain trapped underneath a sleeve—it demands the opportunity to breathe and show itself off. Overall, it's a handsome watch that is redolent of German design intelligence. It's set in an attractive blue, making it instantly legible and providing a great contrast with the rose-gold case. Powering the watch is the Tutima Caliber 619, an in-house-produced and manually wound movement running at 21,600 bph. It allows for a lengthy 65-hour power reserve, and the see-through caseback offers a fantastic view of the gold-plated, finely finished back. Looking closely through the crystal caseback into the gold-finished movement, you'll see that the ruby jewels are held in place by gold chatons, a signature of fine watchmaking from Glashütte. The dual time zone Patria costs $19,500.

TOP: Front view of the Tutima Glashütte Patria.
LEFT: Caseback of the Tutima Glashütte Patria.